THE JAMESTOWN SHOW BUILDINGS

Preliminary Work Done and Plans For Structures Commenced.

COLONIAL STYLE ADOPTED

The Administration Building Will Be Put Up Before Others Commenced.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) NORFOLK, VA., Nov. 18.—The Jamestown Exposition Company has finished practically all of its surface and sub-surface work; has laid out its boulevards and avenues, collected shrubs and plants for decorative purposes, installed its sewerage and water system, collected its decorative shade trees and fenced in its property. The work of erecting the exhibition buildings will commence within buildings are designed to be permanent structures.

Art and History Pavilions.

The Pavilions of Art and History from the very nature of their functions must be absolutely fireproof. In each of these will be housed a collection which could only be gathered under guarantee of immunity from fire; and the Administration Building, which will be used as well for an auditorium, could not subserve this latter purpose with any degree of safety, unless it were fairly impervious to a blaze.

The Administration Building is really two structures in one, consisting of the front, or dome part, with its wings and the rear auditorium section. By passing up the broad steps to the splendid portico, one may cross it, and through one of three paths of main entrance doors may enter the rotunda.

This part of the building has two stories, with a gallery at the second-floor level, and the roof is dome-shaped, sixty feet above the first landing.

Only One Building Now.

Only the plans and specifications of this administration building are being prepared at present. The idea of the exposition company being to have this work commenced before the pavilions of art and history are begun.

All of the drawings and specifications for the buildings and plans for the grounds of the Jamestown Exposition are prepared by a board of design, consisting of a landscape architect, Mr. Warren H. Manning, of Boston, and the following well known architects: J. Harleston Parker, of Boston; Douglas H. Thompson, Jr., Baltimore, and John Kevan Peebles, Norfolk, Va.

In addition to these gentlemen, the board has as a member, Mr. Charles S. Peabody, of Boston, one of the deans of the architectural profession of America.

Clayton, a brother of the life tenant, is rightful owner of the property, refusing to set aside an alleged fraudulent deed to said George B.
